This week's trophy for Best DVD Title goes to Zombies of the Stratosphere. Made in 1952, the cheesy sci-fi flick was among Republic Studios' collection of Saturday-matinee serials. (The movie's distributor is the aptly named, Cheezy Flicks). The most remarkable thing Stratosphere has going for it is Leonard Nimoy's sci-fi introduction as a Martian trying to nuke the Earth out of the solar system. As such, this is a must for any collector of pre-Star Trek relics and trivia.
