

The Goods

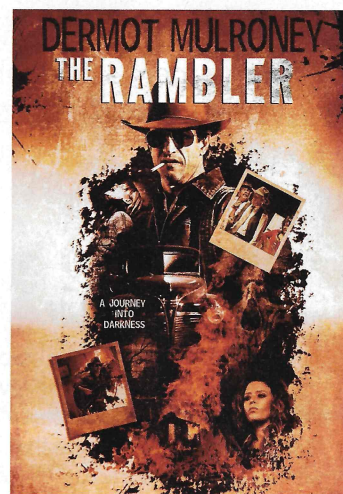

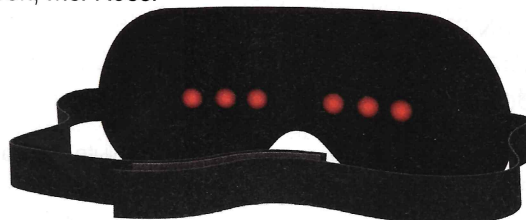

A buncha stuff you want...

BY RANDY HARWARD

1 Smiling Next To You

Reme Lucid Dreaming Sleep Mask ($95)
www.sleepwithremee.com

You know that recurring dream where you and Diana Ross circa The Wiz are in a cabin doin' the nasty, then Jason Voorhees from Friday the 13th breaks in with a machete, threatening to end the festivities? Now you can have that dream every night, thanks to The Reme lucid dreaming sleep mask. The lightweight, comfortable Reme triggers flashing red lights when you're in REM sleep. After some practice and settings-tweaks, you recognize the lights during dreams and be in full control of your dreams. See you soon, Ms. Ross.

2 Are We Not Graven?

Devo Throbblehead ($25)
www.aggronautix.com

This is one of our favorites from the Aggronautix throbblehead line. Probably because it's not meant to resemble any particular band member. It's just a nameless Energy Dome Guy, a nod to the band's concept of de-evolution. And what better polyresin calf to genuflect to, than one representing an idea instead of an individual? Now shameless, greedy, slavish geeks can pretend to be deep. Devo's "Nacho Libre Jihad Gerry (Casale)" says, "[The Devo throbblehead is] seven perfect inches for you!"

3 Rolling!

Cineskates Pro ($150)
www.cinetics.com

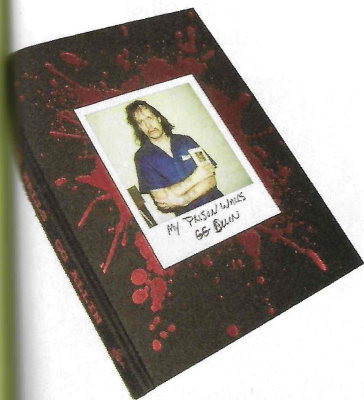

In filmmaking, when you're starting out, it helps to know people. Especially people with gear. Next to cameras and lights, something like a dolly track system is nice to have. These can get expensive, so the Cineskates Pro from Cinetics is a godsend. True to its name, the Cineskates Pro is like a skateboard with a camera mount that enables tracking, panning and arcing shots at a fraction of the price. It's also easier to lug around – lighter and more compact. Check out the demo footage online, and have a look at the accessories. You'll be amazed at the possibilities Cinetics gear provides.

5 One Person's Crap Is Another's Candy Bar

www.anchorbayentertainment.com

You can get this movie for four big ones on Amazon at the time of this writing. Some might call it a waste of money. Fans of cult/bad/psychotronic/grindhouse cinema will love it for what it is: a diamond ensconced in a turd.

6 Shit-erature

My Prison Walls by G.G. Allin ($50)
www.aggronautix.com

If someone offers you a peek inside the mind of notorious punk rock filth frolicker G.G. Allin, take it. You might be a little fucked up afterward, but even society's most twisted minds have something to offer. Even if it's just a cringe or eleven. Limited to 2500 copies—no reprints, ever!

4 Ink-cognito

Ink Armor by Tat2X ($13-16 per sleeve)
www.tat2x.com

So your tattoo is putting a kink in your job search. Laser removal isn't an option—but gainful employment trumps looking cool on the hierarchy of needs. Well, Tat2X's Ink Armor sleeves are available in full sleeves and half-sleeves, as well as calf sizes. They're comfortable, they come in a variety of colors/sizes, and block harmful UV rays. More importantly, they'll increase your chances of getting paid. Maybe.
