

February 2, 2012

HUFF POST ENTERTAINMENT

THE INTERNET NEWSPAPER: NEWS BLOGS VIDEO COMMUNITY

Like 62k Follow

Search The Huffington Post

FRONT PAGE POLITICS BUSINESS ENTERTAINMENT TECH MEDIA LIFE & STYLE CULTURE COMEDY HEALTH

ENTERTAINMENT CELEBRITY MUSIC MOVIEFONE TV POLITICAL HOLLYWOOD TRAILERS AND CLIPS FEATURES HOLLYWOOD BUZZ

WATCH: Is This The Latest Sexually Fluid Dance-Pop Hit?

More In Entertainment: Desirable Oscar Nominees... Kanye In The Mideast?... Are A-Listers Taking HGH?...

The View's Cornelius &

Melissa Webster

Screenwriter

GET UPDATES FROM MELISSA WEBSTER

FAN RSS EMAIL Follow Like 8

The KerPUNK Festival and the Power of the Internet

Posted: 02/1/2012 2:23 pm

ADVERTISEMENT

The big draw was the headliner show by Prima Donna. Specializing in grime, Prima Donna was polished and ready to rock with a stage presence that would have fit in anywhere, whether it was the small venue atmosphere of drinking shots and gulping beer with the fans in-between songs to the more choreographed setting of an arena show with thousands in attendance. As Aaron of the band The Mystic Knights & The Cobras told me many times over the weekend, "They are the hardest working, nicest, best looking band out there right now." I couldn't agree more. These are true rock stars, with their newest album called Bless This Mess being released on Valentine's Day. Check it out. You won't be disappointed.