ANDERSON, LYNN
Live at the Renaissance Center

MVD

Lynn Anderson rose to fame in the 1970's with her hit song "Rose Garden," that for you new fans to country music was indeed covered by Martina McBride on her latest album "Timeless." On this DVD, recorded in 2004, Anderson shows that she still has what it takes to make it in the business. It took her some time to get the crowd worked up, but what was really impressive was that she kept encouraging the crowd to make noise and sing-a-long with her more familiar tunes like "How Can I Unlove You" and "Even Cowgirls Get The Blues." She displayed that she is a true performer and she is more than just one song. She had a lot of fun on stage and it made her performance that much more enjoyable to watch. You can just tell when a performer loves what they are doing and Anderson certainly does and this DVD showcases that. Great DVD, and you will find out that you know a lot more of the tunes on here than you thought you did. (JK)
