

The Week in Sleaze

January 30 - February 5, 2007

Also on deck this week: MGM puts The Silence of the Lambs back into rotation with a Collector's Edition that's simply a reissue of its 2001 Special Edition; Warner sweeps out the vaults with the Michael Crichton plastic surgery thriller Looker, which comes in a widescreen presentation and with commentary by Crichton, and the re-donkulous Gymkata, with fey Olympian Kurt Thomas taking on oily foreigners with his patented kung-fu-on-a-parallel-bar moves; and The Weinstein Company delivers Prey, about a family trapped in a wild animal park by hungry lions. On the music front: Death on the Road: 2003 Tour (Sanctuary) is a three-disc (two CD, one DVD) set from Iron Maiden's tour of the same name; apparently, this is the third go-round for this title, which has been plagued by production and quality issues. And there's Guns N' Roses: DVD Collector's Box (MVD), which culls interviews and early footage of the band from two previous GNR releases, The Prettiest Rock Star and Sex 'n' Drugs 'n' Rock 'n' Roll. Good for those who don't have those discs, one supposes.
