What they say: Sebastian, a loner artist, spends his days in the seediness of life's slums, photographing violent acts and spending his nights at a fetish bar. Boldly brave, House of Flesh Mannequins pulls you into the building's landlord. He has also suffered an abused childhood, being subjected to watching home videos. Things begin to change for him when apartment tenant, Sarah Rowland, moves in. House of Flesh Mannequins is a work and Sebastian himself. Boldly brave, House of Flesh Mannequins pulls you

What I say: House of Flesh Mannequins is trying to issue in the new wave of E-rated horror. Sebastian, a loner artist, spends his days in the seediness of life's slums, photographing violent acts and spending his nights at a fetish bar where anything goes, and believe me you get to see even the most ready pretty harsh, but once at the house it gets REALLY harsh.

Sebastian is also the landlord at his building, tenant Sarah starts to get interested in the things that spiral downward until the horrific ending.

The acting is spotty at best, but the direction, editing, and cinematography are a best looking nastiest films I have ever seen and believe me it will stick with you.

Extras include the five “snuff” movies seen in the film, make-up effects featurette

Film: 8/10
