The Deadly Spawn (Blu-Ray)

Director: Douglas McKeown

Writers: Ted A. Bohus (story), John Doe

Stars: Charles George Hildebrandt, Tom

(From imdb.com)

What they say: Two campers in the Northwest go on an outdoor fun interrupted by the arrival of a meteorite. They go to investigate the crater, but are suddenly attacked by alien parasites who have hitched a ride to Earth. The campers, the hungry space monsters head to the make their domain in the basement of an old house and soon begin polishing of another. Four young teenagers, plus one pre-teen boy, try to find a way to stop them as they reproduce and literally eat humanity.

What I say: I have a deep and misunderstood love for The Deadly Spawn. I love the storyline, and really I dig the whole package. Who could help but love a movie about multiple heads living in a basement and eating people? Not me, that's for sure.

As enjoyable as the film is, this Blu-Ray does not offer the best this movie could be. It's DNR'd with a lot of detail wiped away. Honestly, the transfer looks like crap, though the original VHS was superior. As for the sound? Tinny and hollow. Man, was I disappointed

Hell on Earth (DVD)

Actors: Brett Fallon, Mary Corrine Mille

What they say: Seventeen year old Bo leg braces and lives with his nasty paren plays with “imaginary friends” provided “Apocryphal Book of Tarkuhm” provide crazy Aunt Sadie. What he does not know are only biding their time until the plane him to read the passage freeing their ma universe.

What I say: It’s bloody, it’s gory, it’s a creature fest. Its sill as can be but it’s worth rental.
