Ultimate Death Match (2009)

If I'm going to keep checking this stuff out I need to become an alcoholic.

Ultimate Death Match (2009)
Directed By: Shawn Cain

The Prologue

And at least our streak of good films comes to a crashing halt as wrestling promoter Shawn Cain (who Roddy Piper doesn't care for) directs and even has a role in this wrestling based horror(?) film, Ultimate Death Match. While the film has no real clear leading star, outside a cameo from former wrestling greats Kevin Nash and Shane Douglas, I guess you could say this stars former wrestler Al Snow. Snow, who's biggest claim to fame publicity wise came during the wrestling boom period of the late 90's/early 2000's as the verbal punching bag of Mick Foley in the WWE (then WWF) and other big moment wrestling came (without being embarrassed wise) when he picked up a mannequin head in the original ECW in the late 90's, called it "Head", and made it up the ranks to actually challenge ECW Champion Shane Douglas at an ECW Pay-per-view called "WrestlePalooza". Yeah, I could ramble on and on about wrestling because I love wrestling, but let's just get to the film?

The Movie

When a wrestler actually dies from a heart attack during one of his pay-per-views, wrestling promoter, Jake Reed, finds himself without a federation and with very much "heat" from the wrestling world. Now I'm not sure if it was because he was at the end of his rope or because he's just a sleazy son of a bitch, but he devises a plan to hold a Death Match event in a small club and host it live on the internet where he promises that someone will die in the last match. This catches the eyes of the world as well as the FBI, but is it typical wrestling stuff of blurring the lines of real and fake, or will someone really die??

WARNING- Anything you read on this site besides movie reviews could have spoilers in it. Besides that please feel free to make yourself at home and leave a comment anytime. If you also have any questions, suggestions, hate mail, send it to crystallakecamper001@gmail.com

SOMETHING AWESOME

WHERE I LURK

You know I think I about died of boredom once or twice while watching this movie. The term "movie" I will use very loosely here, as the film comes off as just a cheap indie wrestling show and would have probably been better had they just went with that. Most of, if not all, of the wrestlers you see wrestling in this thing are real wrestlers. And while the film has bad editing, I'm pretty sure they really worked each match out for the tournament the movie is based around. Now some of the wrestling does look bad even for a low-rent indie fed, but still I think more fun would have been had with that since most the film is the matches anyway. So you get about an hour or more wrestling (some not very good) and about 20 or less minutes of actually storyline...or should I stop using wrestling lingo here and just call it a plot right?

I think the most fun I had with the film was the couple minutes we get a real conversation between Jake (who is actually wrestling promoter Shawn Cain in real life) and former wrestling stars Kevin Nash and Shane Douglas at the start, as they obviously are talking to some upstarts about the business side of wrestling. I don't think that part was scripted, but if it was or wasn't more stuff like that and less of what we get would have been awesome. Al Snow who is in the role of "Frosty" and one of the commentators in the film is also probably the only lasting ray of light to the movie. His commentary is rather funny at times, which doesn't shock me seeing as how Al has always been a pretty funny guy in wrestling. Still, he's not enough to save this mess.

There's bad acting, as some of the wrestlers are just stiff on camera and not stiff at all in the ring, making things look way more fake than they should be (or usually look while watching wrestling). The editing is horrible, the plot makes no sense, and we don't even get a real ending as it's just a setup for the sequel which according to IMDB has bigger wrestling names in it, but seems to just be more of the same as this. If you just want to watch some badly edited, at times badly worked, and a bit lackluster wrestling, you may get something out of this. But if you actually want a real movie, and I did when I watched it, then you may be better off leaving this one behind and finding something else. Unless of course you're just an Al Snow fan. J.O.B. Squad for life right?..Yeah, maybe 3% of you got that last line there.

The Conclusion

I love wrestling, but I sure do not love this. If you think you may want to give it a go you can find it along some other really great stuff over at MVD Video. But I must stress this film isn't for a lot of people..I'm not sure it's for anyone. That being said, there IS a sequel so should I just assume someone out there somewhere really digs this?..Ah..some people are just crazy.
