Apr Lance Lopez – Handmade Music

LIT has been fans of Lance Lopez for over a decade now, even going so far as to call the Oak Cliff native the equal of Stevie Ray Vaughn, only without catching the big break. That said, his latest CD is a bit disappointing. The blues-rock icon's talent is so immense (he even ventures into metal with ease) that he appears to be trying to display it and prove it on every song. While there are spectacular moments, the songs seem more like showcases of skill, but lacking in spirit and soul. Handmade can fill an iTunes playlist nicely, but ultimately you're better off catching this guitar wizard live.
