Rating: 6 stars!

John Lydon is best remembered as the angry front man for the Sex Pistols but after the Pistols imploded the individual members went on to do random musical ventures...John's was the most memorable because he formed a band called PIL which scored a major label deal, put out a few noteworthy records & toured the world over.

PIL has a new dvd on shelves & it's a pro shot show from 1983 that's part of the Rockpalast series...this set captures the band in their prime & there's quite a few rare gems on this disc including a cover of "Anarchy in the UK" which PIL rarely performed, as well as rehearsal footage which was previously unreleased & a cool little interview with Johnny prior to the bands set.

I was fortunate enough to see PIL on their last tour BUT the band I saw was NOT the same band that's on this disc...this band is PIL at their best & John's humor is spread through the show when he randomly makes comments & what more can I say, this is a kick ass concert disc!
