"I Need That Record" DVD Viewing

So, I'm watching "I Need That Record," a documentary about independent record stores... and damn... I miss working at the Record Exchange. In the same way that everybody in this movie talks about missing the community of an independent record store, I echo that thought. I think about how foreign it is to visit an independent record store and it creeps me out that it feels so foreign to me. Every so often I visit New York and hit up some of my favorites, but none of them are my regular shop... and there isn't that connection that I used to feel. I know I used to work at one, and that's different than just visiting a shop... but even when it existed and I didn't work there, it was still something that I wanted to visit each time I set foot into town. I owe so much to that shop... so many friends that I've met, so many people that I haven't seen since I left...

God bless the independent music shop. I sure wish The Record Exchange/Plan 9 Music was still in Roanoke, VA. Please visit your local shop...
