Moore on Record Store Day

MVD Visual will release "I Need That Record! The Death (or Possible Survival) of the Independent Record Store" for North American distribution on April 17, Record Store Day.

It will be offered exclusively to independent record stores for a period of 90 days. Afterwards, it will be available everywhere on July 27.

Guerilla filmmaker Brendan Toller presents a documentary feature examining why over 3,000 independent record stores have closed across the U.S. in the past decade.

The doc features discussion and commentary by THURSTON MOORE (above) of Sonic Youth, IAN MACKAYE of Dischord Records Fugazi/Minor Threat, activist/author NOAM CHOMSKY, MIKE WATT of the Minutemen, LENNY KAYE, guitarist of the Patti Smith Group, CHRIS FRANTZ of the Talking Heads/Tom Tom Club, PATTERSON HOOD of Drive-By Truckers, PAT CARNEY of the Black Keys, punk author LEGS MCNEIL, and rock photographer BOB GRUEN.

By David Burger

David Burger is the pop music/pop culture writer at The Salt Lake Tribune. He's been at several newspapers, including Scranton, Pennsylvania, the home of "The Office." Before that, he spent five years in the Coast Guard. There, on boring midnight watches on the bridge, he would try to keep himself awake and/or keep from throwing up by singing "Thunder Road" to himself while balancing a sextant on his nose. (He'd also look for drowning people, of course.) He also likes condiments, except when throwing up.
