Paul McCartney Really Is Dead: The Last Will and Testimony of George Harrison MVD Visual
<http://mvdb2b.com/b2b/>

Rating: D-

Okay... here goes... you will LOVE this.... In 2005 a mysterious package shows up at the door of a company who makes DVDs... wow... .that was lucky. In the package – which the guy at Highway 61 Entertainment actually HOLDS UP in the air and shows the British stamps on the package – are two micro cassettes. What ever could be on these tapes? I'll bet that George Harrison, who was dead at the time, left instructions for someone to mail them to this company a few years after his death because they would be the most reputable place to break the amazing story.... That PAUL IS REALLY DEAD.

That, is indeed, what was in the envelope. Just a day or so after someone broke in George's home and stabbed him George decided he better get the truth about what happened to Paul on audio tape --- DAMN video would have worked soooooo much better – but there was no home video in 2005. Oh wait. Well, the attacker made off with his camcorder..maybe. Anyhoo.... George tells the story of how Paul was killed and replaced and for some reason feels compelled to go through all of the clues on Beatles songs and albums that we already all knew about and had accepted as a hoax.

George refers to as Paul as "Faul" standing for Fake Paul. From here on out I am going to refer to George on these tapes as "Forege." Forege goes on to inform us that John Lennon was going to blow the whistle but was shot down before he could do so. Also, Faul hooks up with the stranger that was in Paul's car the night of the accident. Her name was Rita. The accident left her with one leg.... You can see where this is going. Faul married her years later.

Oh this must have been a fun movie to make but one that is also in very bad taste. Is it worth a peek? Much the same way one can't change the channel when they stumble upon a drunken dude on Cops or two fat topless chicks slugging it out on Jerry Springer, the answer is 'yes.'
