This is an amazing documentary. If you are a Beatles fan, you must watch it. It shows a side of the Beatles that has never been seen. It also has some great rare Beatles footage. The story told in this film just might be the greatest story in rock and roll history. I can't say enough good things about it. I've never watched a documentary that had me on the edge of my seat like this one. But I am a huge Beatles fan :) You can instantly watch it on Netflix!

This is easily one of the worst documentaries ever produced. FFS they even claim that Heather Mills was the girl who caused Paul McCartney's fatal crash in 1966, and that Heather Mills is her new identity. If we assume that she was let's say 16 at the time of the crash, she would be 60+ now. Does she look 60+ to you? She was born in 1968. Also, they don't give you any of the real audio from the "last testament of George Harrison". If it was really him on the tape, why not put it on there? I'm a pretty big conspiracy buff and even I see right through this shoddy documentary. I will however admit to the possibility that The Beatles were just fucking with everyone and started this rumor themselves, then perpetuated it throughout the years.

I was not implying in anyway that any of it was true. Just that it was an excellent story (true or false) with excellent footage. I stand in the middle on almost all conspiracies. It might be true, it might not be true, we will never know.

And to my understanding, the narration of the film is straight from the cassette tapes labeled "the last testament of George Harrison." It is all the real audio from the cassettes (obv minus all the news clips n such). Now if that's actually George Harrison? Who knows? But it is still a fascinating tale none the less.

And your Heather Mills argument is lame. The film even states she was given all the free plastic surgery she wanted. But I digress, true or false it is a great film with a great story.

everyone knows that Paul McCartney is dead. Angela Lansbury took over his identity.

no, she didnt lose her leg in the alledged crash that killed paul. the narrator (supposadly george) claims that in the 70s or 80s (i cant remember) she contacted faul(fake paul) and said she was going to go public unless he divorced linda and married her. Faul then contacted the M15 handler and shortley after she was involved in an auto accident(she was a padestrian) in wich she lost her leg.

anything is possible! i mean if paul mccartney can go from being left handed in the 60's to righthanded in the 80's, then anything is plausible ;)
