I Think We're Alone Now in 150 Words or Less

Must be seen, and then rewound and seen immediately again, to be believed... and then you might still not want to believe it, because it's just so disconcerting and scary. And funny! These folks are like bright little balls of crazy quotable Tiffany-worshiping magic. Yes, this is the doc that follows the two stalker-types still obsessed with that 80s pop sensation. And it's as uncomfortable and hysterical as you could ever imagine such a thing to be. If you could imagine such things, which beforehand you probably couldn't. Truth isn't just stranger than fiction - truth eats fiction for breakfast sometimes, and then sits in the dark sipping vodka and screaming songstress-themed obscenities. Magical wonderment, fun for the whole family.

i've heard about this! and wouldn't ya know it? it's on netflix on demand! someone upstairs loves us! they should tour malls with this movie!

JA said...

LOL totally. I forgot to mention the Netflix thing - it is indeed on there, that's how I watched it. And watched it immediately again. It's barely over an hour long though so it invites such excess.

oh the excess! this will go along right next to my trash marathon of Showgirls, New York Minute and Glitter, all washed down with $10 wine of course! my subway is being hijacked by shuttle buses this weekend so this is the perfect weekend to watch this doc. thanks for the recommendation!
