A documentary film that follows two fans obsessed with 80s pop singer Tiffany \(http://www.tiffanytunes.com\) has been released on DVD.

I Think We're Alone Now \(http://www.ithinkwerealonenow.com\) follows Jeff and Kelly, who both claim to be in love with the 80s pop singer .

Speaking about the film with Viceland, Filmmaker Sean Donnelly said: "Yeah, a little bit. It's fascinating how much these two very different people have in common. They both don't have a job, they both hang out at home a lot, they're both much more cut off from society than most people are and are alone. Because of their disabilities and social awkwardness they've both got to this place, and they're older now and have limited interactions with other people. They both watch a ton of TV, read a lot of magazines, so both of them are living vicariously. Everybody likes entertainment but when you have very little else going on in your life, that sort of becomes your life."

It appears Tiffany was not impressed with the film. She feels it is making fun of her fans. "I didn't authorize it," she told Entertainment Weekly. "I don't think it's good to make fun of those situations."
