DVD Digest: "I Think We're Alone Now"

December 27, 2010 Film

I Think We're Alone Now, 2008

Every celebrity deals with his or her share of obsessed fans. I Think We're Alone Now is a documentary that focuses on two individuals, Jeff and Kelly, who claim to be in love with the 80's pop singer Tiffany.

Jeff Turner, a 50-year-old man from Santa Cruz, California has attended Tiffany concerts since 1988. Diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome, he never had a girlfriend. Jeff spends his days hanging out on the streets of Santa Cruz, striking up conversations with anyone who has a moment to spare.

Kelly McCormick is a 35-year-old intersex person from Denver, Colorado, who claims to have been friends with Tiffany as a teenager. She credits Tiffany as the shining star who has motivated her to do everything in her life.

Both Jeff and Kelly have been labeled stalkers by the media and other Tiffany fans. This film takes you inside the lonely lives these two characters, revealing the source of their clinging obsessions. This age-old story of unrequited love takes a comedic and emotional trip through themes of desperation, isolation, and hope, in the end showing that having something, or someone, to believe in can be more powerful than anything reality has to offer. Tricia's Take: I found this documentary truly enjoyable, taking me on much more of an emotional ride than I expected going in. The filmmakers did well to capture Jeff and Kelly respectfully, but also humorously. Clocking in at only 61 minutes, I Think We're Alone Now is a great film to choose if you're not looking to invest too much into movie night but would still like to remain a bit thought provoking.

I Think We're Alone Now is available via Netflix Watch Instantly

Artist Shout Out: Daniele Del Nero's "After Effects"

By Harold Johns III

Daniele Del Nero's After Effects is a series of architectural scale models constructed with black paper and covered with flour and a layer of mold to create the effect of old abandoned buildings. Del Nero's use of mold might be a little disgusting to some but to me using the uncontrollable beauty of nature, especially ...Read More

The Rochas Spring 2011 collection has been aptly named "chic hausfrau" by the public. Designer Marco Zanini and his collaborator sister reached back to their Swedish ancestry to create a modestly cool collection. Modest: oversized boxy shapes, loose fits, buttoned-to-the-top blouse undershirts, head scarves and knee socks. Cool: sheer, lounge wear, lingerie, and bold prints ...Read More

According to Eugene of My Modern Met:

A few years ago, French photographer Sacha Goldberger found his 91-year-old Hungarian grandmother Frederika feeling lonely and depressed. To cheer her up, he suggested that they shoot a series of outrageous photographs in unusual costumes, poses, and locations. Grandma reluctantly agreed, but once they got rolling, she couldn't ...Read More
