"I Think We're Alone Now": Tiffany Documentary Alert!

My most cherished possession as a 7-year-old was my autographed cassette tape of Tiffany's self-titled album. It read "Best of luck! Tiffany." My dad knew someone at the local radio station who hooked it up. I slept with it under my pillow for days. Yeah, I was a strange child. I wonder what happened to that, by the way? I lost track of it when I turned 9. But I digress. The important thing for you to know is that there is a new documentary out called "I Think We're Alone Now" about Tiffany and her "super fans. Read: obsessive stalkers. Looks like these peeps saved their autographed cassette tapes. In fact, they probably still sleep with them under their pillows. I need to see this, STAT. [\[NY Post\]](#)

Good Lord! I can't look away! The dude who was issued a restraining order STILL thinks that he and Tiffany love each other? Wow, the delusions in this documentary are frightening and fascinating at the same time.

I can't believe Tiffany let the stalker dude hug her!!!!
