Adrien Brody and Laurence Fishburne star in Predators.

Oceans and The Crimson Wing: Mystery of the Flamingos (G): Two visually stunning Disney nature documentaries are available in separate releases, on DVD or in a DVD/Blu-ray combo pack.

Colin and Aah! Zombies!! (Unrated): Get ready for Halloween by getting into the zombie mind-set with these two film-festival hits that take the point of view of the living dead. The British film Colin was filmed on a budget of $75 — really. Writer-director Marc Price used an old camcorder to shoot the film and edited it on his home computer. It's available as a single disc or in a two-DVD set. Aah! Zombies!! is a more comical take on the subject, following four friends who run afoul of some toxic slime and get zombified.

Apocalypse Now: Full Disclosure Edition on Blu-ray (R): Francis Ford Coppola's unforgettable 1979 war drama returns in a three-disc special edition loaded with extras, including two versions of the film, the feature-length documentary Hearts of Darkness, hours of bonus features and a booklet.

Moulin Rouge and Romeo + Juliet on Blu-ray (PG-13): Director Baz Luhrmann's frenetic, music-laden romances look "spectacular, spectacular" in high-def. Each film has gotten a new HD transfer, and each has picture-in-picture commentary and behind-the-scenes featurettes.

Also New on DVD: Assault of the Sasquatch, a low-budget horror film about Bigfoot hitting the big city; Night of the Demons, a remake of the 1988 horror film about teenagers partying in an abandoned mansion, which turns out to be a bad idea; Mirrors 2, a straight-to-video sequel; Smash His Camera, a documentary about celebrity photographer Ron Galella; Six Wives of Henry Lefay, a comedy with Tim Allen; Agora, a sweeping epic set in 4th-century Egypt with Rachel Weisz as a woman centuries ahead of her time; Bangkok Adrenaline, a fast-paced action thriller with elaborate martial arts fight scenes; and The Killing Machine, an action film with Dolph Lundgren.
