

CONCERT REVIEW:
Glenn Tilbrook
and the Fluffers Live
in New York City

Remember that song...
 “Tempted by the fruit of another,
 Tempted but the truth is discovered”?

Sure, that's that one song. What's the name of it? Everybody's heard that song, "Tempted." It is by the British pop band Squeeze some years ago. It and other Squeeze classics are brought back to life by Glenn Tilbrook, lead singer and co-songwriter for Squeeze, in a new concert film, Glenn Tilbrook and the Fluffers Live in New York City.

The Fluffers are Tilbrook's new band, playing Squeeze songs along with stuff from Tilbrook's solo albums. The concert DVD contains nine Squeeze songs and seven songs from Tilbrook's solo albums. The audience in the DVD seems to be a nostalgic one. They really get pumped for "Tempted." You could write this off as a nostalgia act, Tilbrook does a lot of talking before most songs on the DVD. A minute long story about how he wrote the song, or where he was when he came up with the chords he's about to play. After a few songs, you get to thinking, 'There's always a story with this guy.'

As for the new band, it is comprised of drummer Simon Hanson, Keyboardist Stephen Large, and Bassist Lucy Shaw. Throughout the concert, Hanson and Large are constantly making weird faces, sometimes into the camera, sometimes just to do it, apparently. Drummer Hanson battles with his microphone throughout the show, which continually threatens to topple over. Apparently, New York was out of duct tape.

The show was filmed in a small room, with a comfortably spaced out middle aged crowd. The DVD features all Tilbrook's classics, such as "By the Light of the Cash Machine," and "Hot Shaved Asian Teens."

There is also a short behind the scenes documentary that features interviews with Tilbrook on the streets of New York, sweating profusely. We get to witness the band on a soundstage rehearsing for the gig.

As pieces of music history go, owning this DVD allows you to show people the guy who sings that one song everybody's heard.
