

Film Review: He (2009)

Posted on 06/13/2011 by Todd Martin

SYNOPSIS:

A very bizarre and paranoid man sees, does, and hears a lot of weird things as he becomes increasingly insane and plans to kill himself.

REVIEW:

First off, let me just say that I love low-budget and independent films of all kinds. Independent films are a million times better than the majority of the mainstream garbage that I see on a weekly basis. Having tried my hand at independent filmmaking (as a director, writer, frustrating and difficult it can be at times to even get a single shot on camera with involved. With that being said, I admire the people behind “He” for giving it a shot put together a movie on what probably a shoestring budget and worked with what effort they put into the film as well as just for having the balls for actually attempting it. It can be a living, breathing nightmare. However, the end result is nothing short of a mess that makes absolutely no sense on any level.

I honestly have no idea what this movie was about. We follow around this guy who walks around making strange noises, talking to people who aren't there, having his wife (and others who may or may not be there, I have no idea if everyone else is) kill people at a cook out, and singing a very odd and disturbing song about violence for way too long).

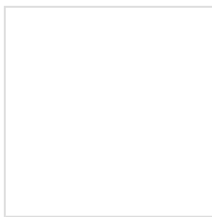

That is pretty much everything that happens folks, no kidding. Oh, we also have no obvious reason throughout the movie as well (what was the point of it, you may ask). I don't know if this film is supposed to be a comedy, an artsy fartsy David Lynch or if it is supposed to be a weird and out there mind trip like “Donnie Darko,” or if a bunch of people just threw something together in about 3 hours just to see if someone would review it. It honestly made absolutely no sense whatsoever and do be honest I just don't know exactly the message behind it is (if there even is one). Maybe I am just stupid and didn't get it. Is the main character schizophrenic and everything is just going on in a split personality? I really just don't know.

In addition to a pretty bad (or should I say non-existent) plot the characters are pretty bad. The man (his name is never said) who is played by Writer/director Creep Creepersin (really good at around talking gibberish and acting nervous. We know nothing about this guy other than he's obviously mentally disturbed and he thinks people are watching him. His wife plays the woman around the house the entire time, yells at the man because he can't get her pregnant, she has a gun in his pocket (what the hell?), and sits around thinking about killing him. She also has a gun in her pocket and is sitting around looking completely and totally insane. There are other characters in the movie but I don't understand the point of any of them so they aren't even worth discussing here. I don't think I can understand the point of any of the characters in the movie other than the man and the woman are just in the man's

I have seen some strange films in my life, but this one pretty much takes the cake. I would give it a chance, but after spending about ten minutes or so trying to figure out what was going on I gave up. I couldn't make heads or tails out of what was going on, so to be quite honest I don't think I could give them a straight answer. Check it out if you want to but don't expect it to make a damn bit of sense. If anyone does watch it and understands what it was about I don't think I could give them a straight answer. Check it out if you want to but don't expect it to make a damn bit of sense. If anyone does watch it and understands what was going on?
