

Film Review: Peeping Blog (2011)

Posted on 08/29/2011 by Todd Martin

SYNOPSIS:

A stalker follows some woman around recording everything that she does with a

REVIEW:

While I am sure that it is going to be hard for some of you out there to believe it, about the movies that I review no matter how terrible they were. I just couldn't do the fact that there are many filmmakers out there busting their butts to make a movie having to use unreliable friends, family members, and coworkers as actors. I've never would care to remember and basically have nothing more to show for it than a concept that I never saw a final cut for whatever reason and a couple of short movies that I only

I love low budget horror films, and admire the folks who put their heart and soul in (as well as a bunch of assholes online talking smack about their movie). Basically that if you put effort into your low budget film that is cool, but if you just half-ass it there is a difference. "Peeping Blog" is an example of the latter, and I am pretty sure the movie to be quite honest about it.

The movie is shot from the perspective of the weirdo operating the camera who throughout the entire movie is just him following her around and recording her doing random things. All of the "scenes" that he is filming so he just sits around waiting for her to show up. As a result, we get way too many shots of interesting things like the front of a bus, a stalker sticking a Hot Pocket in the microwave (why would he film this? I have no idea) too long and I don't know if Creep Creepersin (the writer/director) is going for a visual style that results will put most people in a coma from boredom. I mean I am all for people who try to be artistic but I think that there are times where you can try too hard.

Did I mention that there is no dialogue? Well, there is, technically, but it is from a distance that we can't hear. The scene with dialogue is very short (way shorter than the ones where we can hear nothing else is going on) and pretty much adds nothing to the plot (wait, is there a plot? The rest of you out there, but I personally like movies to have some sort of verbal exchange). Again, I think that the lack of dialogue is an attempt to be artsy, and while it does work in some shorts that run less than five minutes) it fails miserably in this particular case.

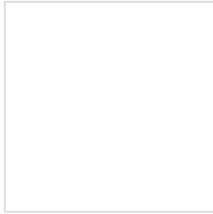

Needless to say, "Peeping Blog" is a terrible movie. I am sure that the people who loved it didn't get it, but in my opinion there really isn't anything about it to get. Unless you like scenes of someone sitting at a stop light then this film is not for you. To be honest, I went through the entire thing without fast-forwarding or skipping to the next scene so I can watch it. I really do believe that this film is an example of someone just filming whatever they see if someone would review it. I know that this review may sound rather harsh, but I am sure Creep Creepersin where he stated "I don't care if anyone watches my movies, as long as they are there!" I really doubt think he is going to be too bothered by this review. Skip this if you want something to help you fall asleep.

Peeping Blog (2011)

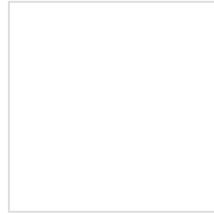

You might also like:

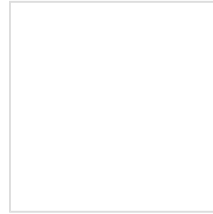

Top 13 Greatest
Serial Killer Movies

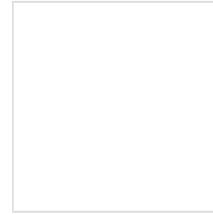

Film Review:
Deadtime Stories:
Volume 1 (2009)

'A Horrible Way to Die' but a pleasure to watch

Book Review:
Guilty Pleasures –
Author Laurel K.
Hamilton

Film Review:
Darkness (2009)

LinkWithin

Related Posts

- Film Review: He \(2009\)
- Film Review: Ding Dong Dead \(2011\)
- Film Review: Corporate Cutthroat Massacre \(2009\)
- Film Review: Platoon of the Dead \(2009\)
- Film Review: Creep Creepersins Frankenstein \(2009\)
- Filmmaker Creepersin Shows Horror Roots with Re-release of Punk Alb
- Interview: Creep Creepersin \(The Monster Killer Club\)
- Book Review: Blood Lust Revenge – Author Creep Creepersin
- Book Review: Blood Lust Romance – Author Creep Creepersin
- Vamps: Elissa Dowling

This entry was posted in Film Reviews and tagged Ariauna Albright, Creep Creepersin, Elissa Dowling, Peeping Blog. Bookn

If you like following our Horror News make sure to subscribe to the RSS Feed!