

MCN Columnists

By Gary Dretzka

dretzka@moviecitynews.com

Posted Wednesday, October 26th, 2011 - No Comments »

Even though World War II ended more than 55 years ago, several perplexing mysteries remain unsolved. Most involve the flight, disappearance and capture of Nazi war criminals, some of whom have died as free men or are still at large. "Nazi Hunters," a Cineflix mini-series that aired on the National Geographic Channel, examines the results of eight such missions through actual film footage, interviews photographs, records and dramatizations. The fugitives include Herbert Cukurs, "the hangman of Riga"; "Butcher of Lyons" and former CIA employee, Klaus Barbie; Adolf Eichmann; Erich Priebke; "Angel of Death," Joseph Mengele, French Gestapo chief Kurt Lischka, who was protected under German law; Paul Touvier, who escaped justice several times; "Beast of Sobibor," Gustav Wagner; and Franz Strangl. The presentation is crisp, to the point and largely unadorned with sentiment. — Gary Dretzka