The Flash

Iggy & The Stooges: Raw Power is an interesting concert film from 2001. I'm not a huge Iggy Pop fan, but this is a pretty neat idea. The band basically took six fans from a contest, gave each of them camcorders, and had them film the entire show. This movie is culled together from that footage, and it has a very raw, immediate feel to it. With bonus interviews with the band, it's a fan's dream come true.

The high def quality varies obviously, due to the nature of the footage being shot, but the music sounds loud, live and powerful, the way a concert disc should sound
