It's a post turkeypocalypse and we're giving away a signed copy of the best and only thanksgiving horror film, "Thankskilling" on DVD. It's a great movie to gather the family around after deserts and before the in-laws break out the homemade whiskey. Just post your favorite thanksgiving memory and the funniest wins. Heck you can even make somethin' up, we ain't the feds. Check out our Lost Highway fan page for more details on how to win.

Now here's the Doktor's Review of Thankskilling for those of you that have woken up from your tryptophan coma.

Tagline: Gobble Gobble Mother F*r

Year: 2009 Runtime: 70 min

Director: Jordan Downey

Writer: Jordan Downey (writer), Kevin Stewart (writer), Bradly Schulz (additional dialogue), Anthony Wilson (additional dialogue) & Grant Yaffee (additional dialogue)

Starring: Wanda Lust, Natasha Cordova and Lindsey Anderson

A big bare breast is the first shot. BAM! Straight out the gate. This movie knows exactly who it's for and where it's going. Just so there is no confusion, this is NOT the film to pop in after the ball game on Thanksgiving. What the film is: pure fart jokes without the high-brow posturing. Take the "named" actress in the film, porn star Wanda Lust. Nothing says pure class like a second string porn star. And just to be cheeky, she plays a Puritan woman. This film is subtle as a ruptured testicle.

Everything about this movie oozes Grade B Government Cheese. And yet, I find it incredibly hard to believe that Troma had nothing to do with this film. Hmmm... but I digress.

The story is the usual hapless-college-kids-run-into-a-crazed-killer-in-the-woods schtick, but the twist is the killer in this film is a foul-mouthed turkey, named, quite ingeniously, Turkie. As the story goes, Turkie was necromanced by a powerful Native American magician to seek revenge for the indigenous peoples, flora and fauna of North America. When raised, Turkie only goes after the group of people he first encounters. Why? Uhm... Hey, there's Milk Melons in the first shot!

How does one raise Turkie? Well, I'm glad I asked. There are two ways, and, as the filmmaker could never decide which he liked better, he left both in the film to further confuse and frustrate us. But, hey, there are Paw Patties right off the bat. The first explanation, he just comes back every 505 years in some kind of "now you don't, now you see him" kind of thing. Granted, that doesn't make much sense, and it REALLY doesn't work out mathematically with the first Thanksgiving mentioned in the beginning... but then again, there were Dairy Dumplings in the first shot. The second explanation, someone's dog can unwittingly pee on his totem pole. Wouldn't you know it, right after them Sweet Sweater Spuds, we see a local redneck and his dog who are out... uhm... doing something, and the dog pees on this random miniature totem pole. The earth quakes, out shoots some blur and puppy falls down dead.

Oh, and hilarity ensues.

Now, I know that you're asking yourself, "Hey, why does Turkie go after the college students when he is supposed to only go after the group of people he first encounters, i.e. the redneck and his dog?" To which the answer is: Juicy Jugs! In the first shot!

I could go on, but I don't want to ruin all the artful expletives and complex plot, so I'll end with this bit of teaser: Turkie dies in the end.

Still, the film closes with a title card that reads, "To be continued... IN SPACE!"

When I saw that the filmmaker had a Kickstarter project to fund Thankskilling 2 a few months back, I gladly sent my money. Stay tuned for more Turkie, and possibly more Num-Nums.

- Rent-A-Center Ted Nugent as the hermit redneck
- Divorce announced by laying a turd in the coffee pot
- Cartoon flashback to tell the creation myth
- Turkie raping the hot brunette
- Flappy Funbags
