BONG OF THE DEAD

“Dude, I’m so f%*ked up...I can’t feel my feet!”

Edwin a reefer connoisseur happens upon the making of a concoction from the brains of zombies; which makes his crops grow faster and stronger. Eager to share his rare fertilizer with his best friend Tommy, the two get high on the super weed and that stuff is so good, they don’t realize then they have smoked it all. There isn’t any replacement Zombie fertilizer to grow more. They must journey into the “danger zones” to capture and kill zombies, so they can collect their brains to make more super weed fertilizer.

Thomas Newman has done a remarkable job on his low ($5,000) budget movie and have to admit, I was skeptical at first, but the movie is funny. Edwin and Tommy were so goofy it was hard not to like them. The best friends remind me of Cheech & Chong from the 70’s & 80’s. Edwin and Tommy bombed out of their minds...they manage to meet a tough talking lady named Leah and team up to hit the mother lode of Zombies.

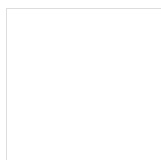

The movie pulls out all the stops on blood and gore factor and nail it. An episode with lawn mowers fashioned in a unique way, were used to wipe out more than one Zombie at a time. It was the bloodiest time of the whole movie. One scene was quite disturbing when a pregnant zombie delivers in mid-step and what happened to the child may have been in context of what a zombie would do, but I found it profound and not entertaining in the least, but to hardcore gore hounds, it may be quickly overlooked.

Humor, if you like “Dude...I’m f%*cked up”, “This is some good Sh*t!” for 98 minutes then this is for you. There were LOTS of lighting up and puffs of marijuana. The ending was good and had shades of Shaun of the Dead, but when watching...watch past the credits or else you will miss something pertinent to the movie. I would recommend this to my friends and fellow reviewers. It was FUNNY and well made! I liked the character camaraderie, the bloody good Special FX were plenty and quite humorous.

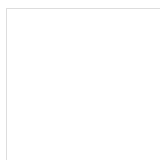

I would say this is a man’s movie...lots of Mary Jane, Boobs and Blood a triple-header! The acting was fair to middlin at times it was strained, but over-all it was entertaining in the comedic vein.
