Review

John Waters fans are likely enjoy this collection of short films from ASS Studios founders and creative collaborators Reverend Jen and Courtney Fathom Sell (two well-known and well-respected writer/filmmaker/comedienne/performance artists from Manhattan's East Village). Filmed with no budget what-so-ever and very little concern for continuity or even coherency, these flicks will provide lots of laughs among crowds of friends with an appreciation for bad taste.

The third short in the collection, Killer Unicorn, features a group of homophobic high school bullies (all played, hilariously, by NYC stage performers in their late-30s and early 40s) who decide to abuse and humiliate an effeminate boy who passes by carrying a pink Trapper Keeper® (the word "faggot" is used A LOT). Shortly after the boy arrives home, he receives a mysterious package at his front door. Inside, he finds a unicorn mask that transforms him into a hulking brute and enables him to enact revenge on the prejudiced punks who ruined his afternoon.
