

coming of rock generation, its music comes mainly from the 1960s and 1970s. The new wave and alternative rock sound of the time is in the spotlight with artists such as New Order, The Smiths, Sonic Youth, Cracker and Cocteau Twins. You can also hear the excellent and catchy "Come On Eileen" by the Dexys Midnight Runners, as well as the classic "Heroes" by David Bowie. It is certainly one of the best soundtracks of the year, in addition to allowing discovering great music from the past by a growing generation.

The Beatles – Their Golden Age

This 60-minute documentary by Les Krantz presents the entire career of the Beatles with different archival footage, some rare. In fact, he presents mostly the beatlemania, the madness that surrounded the band on tour and in its every move. It also presents shooting footage and other images of their movies: A Hard Day's Night, Help!, The Magical Mystery Tour, Yellow Submarine and Let It Be. The only drawback of the DVD is that it doesn't deal very much with their music and most importantly, you don't hear any music by the Beatles, a copyright issue. Despite this negative aspect, the documentary still does an excellent portrait of the band's career, which has evolved at an impressive speed over a period of only 8 years.

Alice Donut – Freaks in Love

Alice Donut is a punk band from the underground scene of New York City which was formed 25 years ago and has never really been successful. Through this 98-minute documentary, we discover the evolution of the group from its debut to today, working very hard to get a place in the American alternative scene. You can see interviews with Jello Biafra, Greg Werckman, Martin Bisi, Curt Kirkwood, among others. One can also find 42 minutes of extra features. The documentary can truly make us discover this rather enigmatic band.
