Joel Gilbert is a very good filmmaker, really putting together great documentaries. His most recent is called "Dreams of My Real Father: A Story of Reds and Deceptions (2012)," and it is his most explosive and interesting. The demand for a birth certificate of our current president has been there from many, but here a new question is posed: Who is his real father? Was this path to power choreographed and scripted to make him out to be something that he is not?

Gilbert does his research and points to Frank Davis, a radical, as the true father of Obama, presenting some very compelling evidence along the way. He tells the story from Obama's perspective, with a voiceover emulating Barack's voice.

Certain things are brought up that support this theory that Gilbert is presenting. Obama's mother posed naked for Davis, and reportedly had a relationship with him during the time of conception. Frank Davis wrote articles pushing for government controlled health care and government controlled corporations. He pushed socialism and the documentary displays how the dreams of Frank Davis may have become the dreams of his possible son, Barack Obama.

The relationship with Bill Ayres is discussed along with how he met his wife, becoming a power couple immediately. This is a very powerful documentary.

Joel Gilbert deserves great credit for this amazing piece of work. Alex Jones, of infowars.com and prisonplanet.com had Gilbert on his program to speak of this documentary and that in itself is a great achievement and well deserved. Gilbert completely nailed this. My hat is off to him and it will absolutely make you think. I can't recommend this enough.

Rating: 10/10 – GREAT documentary.
