Tight (2011)

Director: Jason Danilak & Shaun Donnelly

Where to get it: MVD/Wild Eye

“Tight” is a kick-ass, all-girl, hard-rock band. Think Go-Go’s meet Metallica. The four member rock band came together in Las Vegas where each hopes they can make the transition from porn star to rock star. And while the ladies do take part in a whole lot of sexual acts, it should probably be noted that this isn’t a porn in any sense of the form. And what nudity we do have is more or less very funny and not much above the normal R rated sexual acts.

I found this movie to be strangely amusing to the point that I had no trouble at all watching it and having it hold my attention. We women are obviously hot and are distracting for obvious reasons, but we can’t deny the acting skills of these women. The key here is for them to act natural since it’s a documentary dealing with an apparent band. I don’t know how much actual acting was done when defining each girl’s character but they play their parts perfectly. Bree Olsen and her “cousin” are also tossed into the mix as the managers and such, which makes for more legit funny moments.

Maybe one complaint could be that the film runs a little bit long, but I don’t think you will ever get bored. And it might sound crazy to some since it will be compared to the cult classic, This is Spinal Tap, so much that I’d probably put this right up there with that film overall. I think at times it can be just as funny as Spinal Tap and the only real complaint is we get some camera work in spots that somewhat kill the documentary vibe, but that is a minor complaint. If you dig hot women and funny comedy moments then you will enjoy this one a whole lot.
