DVD REVIEW: BATH SALT ZOMBIES

Tuesday, March 5th, 2013

Most of the time, a cool title or box art is usually all it takes to grab my attention when I'm looking for the next movie to add to my library films. Then there are the times when a movie title is just so insane or crazy that I have to check it out. Bath Salt Zombies does just that. Even looking at the box art is enough to gain an interest from me. The question here is: can this movie be judged by it's cover?

The bath salts epidemic facing the southern and mid-western US has been stifled by an unprecedented government crackdown. This has led to a tremendous amount of surplus stock hidden by black market dealers, and a migration of those dealers to the northeast. In New York City, potent strands have surfaced and have attracted the most devoted bath salt junkies. A young aspiring chemist has developed an even stronger batch... but something has gone horribly wrong. The new ultra potent bath salt batch has revealed a major side effect: It turns users into violent flesh seeking ZOMBIES!

The film started off with an animation intro that pretty much set the tone for the rest of the story. The colors and the opening music track really got you ready to experience the onslaught of what was that was about to come your way. The film did use more of the standard and basic effects that worked with the style and theme of the type that was what it was intended for. The scenes of gore and most of the blood splatters were done quite well for what the budget cost and was entertaining to say the least. Another aspect of the film that I enjoyed was the green screen usage and how it was used. I'm not a big fan on the use of a green screen if it is used too much, but here it was used as a parody and it did work. Now there were a few things that did not work like some of the props that were used. A painted Lizard mask from the Amazing Spider-Man movie was a pretty obvious stand out along with other items that were modified for use.

To sum it up, the movie is a good party movie and one to not take too seriously. If you are going to watch it, be sure to have a lot of beer or alcohol on hand. The acting performance will either have you laughing or shaking your head. A drinking game would be a lot of fun while watching this movie. Take a shot when a body organ gets ripped out Mortal Kombat style or take a shot when a pair of boobs get shown. Either way, it's worth a watch, but you would probly enjoy it with a group of friends.
