Bad Meat (Jinga Films)

BAD MEAT makes reference to several subgenres without fitting neatly into any one of them. It comes closest to fitting the cannibal category since that is technically the foe of the plot. But it doesn't neatly tow the party line or follow established routes of said subgenre. It also puts a group of delinquent youths in woody isolation but there are no masked murderers lurking. And it's no typical youth camp. It is the worst sort of camp for troubled teens. The cruelty of the camp boss, who reads books about Hitler and giggles, and his henchmen – an S&M couple and a hickish creep – point to the other horror branches upon which the film climbs. It is a full blown horror film that gets away with humor. It has aspects of prisonsploitation. It leans heavily on zombie ideas. It has a smudge of redneck horror. But in the end it is not quite any of these. BAD MEAT is horrifying, original, smart, gritty, disturbing and, ultimately, outstanding. One of the best of 2013 so far ...
