

Street Voice UK PR ~ Music And Modelling PR Site

June 2013 Reviews

16 Sunday Jun 2013

POSTED BY STREET VOICE UK IN UNCATEGORIZED

≈ LEAVE A COMMENT

A SECRET POLICEMANS BALL – Teenage Crimewave: This Nashville based indie band have had their album in the making for six years and it's a pretty cool listen. In fact they've fine tuned every song so they uniquely stand out and that's why I've enjoyed every track here. In fact in 10 years time this album will stand out because of the great musicianship and dark vocals from Nikki Cliff. For a heads up I'd check out tracks such as 'I'm Not A Scientist', 'A Flock Of Beagles' and 'Stairway To Upstairs'. Almost certainly the best tracks on this release though the others aren't far behind! I love the way that the band have developed these songs unlike many others who have an album out even before they've played a gig! 8/10

MVD Audio

CRY HAVOC – New Life EP: If you're into bands like Avenged Sevenfold, Bullet For My Valentine and Guns N Roses then you should be listening to Cry Havoc. Some great musicianship and vocal delivery here which these guys should be proud of and with songs like 'Losing On' only confirms to me what a good band these guys are! Just give these a listen and you'll find some enjoyable tunes on this EP. 7/10

Self Released

DIRTY REVOLUTION – The Heat: I'd been waiting for a fair while for this album to be released. When it fell through the letterbox this beauty was straight in the CD player. From the opening moments I knew this was going to be the album that I hoped that Dirty Revolution would record and track by track I fell more in love with The Heat. Musically the band have moved on from their earlier sound to a more of a reggae / dub sound but the ska beats are there too! Lyrically the band are still as socially aware as ever. More so than their debut. I think this album really captures what Reb and Dirty Revolution are about. Every track on here is well worthy of being heard but the ones that stood out for me included 'Feel The Fear', 'The Heat', 'The Frontline', 'No Mans Land' and 'Life's Too Short'. Everything about this album IO love and I think it's one of the best albums I've heard this year. You can't go wrong with this band so if you've not heard Dirty Revolution before this album is a good place to start! 9.5/10

Dirty World Records

IMMENSION – The Enemy Within EP: I think I've finally found a new metal band in the UK that I actually think stand out from the crowd. Immension have many influences which include Arch Enemy, In Flames and Metallica and with their own ideas they really tear it up! It's not