Directed by Tom Alexander, "The Dark Dealer" is a quirky supernatural thriller about three hell-bound characters gambling with their lives and souls in a game of blackjack with the devil. This indie horror film from MVD Visual and Whacked Movies is in the (bloody) vein of "Creepshow" and "Tales from the Crypt." Like other classic horror anthologies of the "The Dark Dealer" blends supernatural horror, action and sensuality into a sinister story with an explosive climax. John McCarty wrote in Fangoria magazine that The Dark Dealer is an ambitious low-budget effort that boasts a solid line-up of computer generated and 'floor' FX."

The first story in this thriller, the creepy, satanic, "Cellar Space" won the Silver Scroll award from the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy, and Horror. In "Cellar Space," a vicious killer invades the cellar apartment of a seemingly defenseless old hermit, but the hoodlum soon finds out that something more than human lives there.

This is the second release from Whacked Movies following the cult film distributor's inaugural release of Bret McCormick's erotic sci-fi romp, "Repligator."
