

COSMIC PSYCHOS

"Blokes That You Can Trust" dvd

I'd never heard of The Cosmic Psychos until watching this movie and suddenly I gained respect & interest for this legendary band which heavily influenced the Seattle grunge scene yet most of the USA have no clue who they even are!

Eddie Vedder from Pearl Jam does a comical walk with a 1/2 dollar shoved in his butt to demonstrate a game the band used to play while on tour and some of the Cosmic Psycho's antics were more rockstar than you could ever imagine despite many of their "games" having slightly gay tendencies.

L7 covered one of the bands songs and the same song was later covered by The Prodigy which helped put a few dollars into the bands pockets. The interesting part of The Cosmic Psychos life is their singers "farm" and that's not a joke...the band is legendary for the farm references as well as a record cover which featured the band standing next to a tractor!

This is a must see music documentary which is entertaining, odd and quite entertaining from start to finish.
