I ZOMBIE: While on a trip to the countryside, a young man is bitten by a stranger. When he returns to the city, a slow degeneration begins. In order to survive he must eat human flesh. Against his own conscience he embarks on a killing spree, dragging his victims to his living room where he devours them limb by limb. "One of the very best British horror films of the past 20 years, a bleak, powerful tale of horror, introspection and social realism". - MJ Simpson

DEAD CREATURES: A group of young women have a terrible, degenerative illness which forces them to murder and feed on human flesh. As they adjust to this carnivorous existence, their only concerns are where to find flesh and how to avoid a zombie hunter. "A study in contrast between dark, brutal savagery and caring companionship. A superb example of the burgeoning millennial rebirth of British horror cinema" - MJ Simpson

VENUS DROWNING: After a failed suicide attempt a vulnerable woman moves to a remote seaside town where she finds a limbless creature on the beach. Soon a quasi-sexual relationship develops between the two with the creature feeding of orgasms.

"Enigmatic, Cronenbergian body horror set in an evocatively desolate British seaside locale. An extraordinary film, sort of The Brood meets Liquid Sky". - MJ Simpson
