In the vein of ABC's of Death meets Tales from the Crypt, only a bit nuttier and way more comical, is the Hillbilly Horror Show. The series has already come out with two volumes available on Roku and the Tubi TV channel. Both are packed with award-winning horror shorts that are sure to be a fun, hilarious ride full of hillbilly hijinks. There are four shorts per volume.

As mentioned on the Wicked Channel, you have some hillbilly hosts that includes Bo, who is your southerner missing a couple marbles in his head, then you have Cephus who seems to mumble a lot and is very much in the vein of the "Silent Bob" character to Bo's Jay. Finally you have Lulu who is a cross between Kelly Bundy and Daisy Duke. To say they try very hard to give male viewers a reason to tune in is an understatement.

Here's the synopsis from Leomark studios:

Each episode of Hillbilly Horror Show is an hour of bloody fun. Hosted by our favorite, fun loving and beer guzzling hillbillies, Bo, Cephus and their "Smo-Kin" cousin Lulu. The show is an anthology of short horror films created by talented, up and coming filmmakers. Created by award winning writer and producer Blu de Golyer (House Of Good And Evil) and veteran actor and producer Bo Keister (Remember The Titans). The team selects and curates some of the scariest horror shorts found on this here planet.

And here's a short review provided by B-Movie Nation:

Four shorts from up and coming filmmakers in an hour show and I don't know if it's possible for the Hillbilly Horror Show to be more fun. The hillbilly hosts Bo (Bo Keister), Cephus (Scott Geiter) provide some slack jaw comments and jokes while Lulu (Rachel Faulkner) provides the eye candy making the entire show entertaining and sexy. The shorts provided in this episode were good quality films.

Hillbilly Horror Show keeps it simple and fun. Filthy Fingernails, the parent company of Hillbilly Horror Show packages and distributes kick-ass short horror films by up and coming, as well as talented filmmakers.
