Rest easy, Cryptkeeper, for there is NO true threat to your horror anthology seat on the throne, especially after watching the latest duo to come out of the trailer park. Hillbilly Horror Show: Volume 1, starring rednecks Bo and Cephus (Bo Keister and Scott Geiter), and their "sno-kin cousin" LuLu. The three have a love for beer-swillin and chillin inside of their rolling domicile, all the while presenting their favorite creepy horror shorts on DVD.

In this particular version, we lay witness to a handful of fairly decent quickies, including "Franky and the Ant", about a vindictive lover who gets the last evil laugh, "Doppelganger" - an award winning short about dueling skeletons (this was pretty amazing in its own right), and one of the best shorts (visually): "The Nest", about a rampaging swarm of oversized bees that are terrorizing a small town. Each story has its ups and downs, but unfortunately there really isn't anything that hasn't been seen before, and the goofy banter between Bo and Cephus will struggle to entertain the casual viewer between tales.

With a short runtime of 60 minutes, I could offer this as a one-time watch, but it's not something that could sustain in a collection.
