

STUBBLE

THE RESIDENTS - The Bunny Boy
(Santa Dog Records)

For those of you unfamiliar with this band, you may find it to be kind of like King Missile performing “Tubular Bells”. But no, this is the Residents. They’ve sounded like this for quite some time minimalistic music and twisted sociopathic ramblings of a confused form of consciousness –in this installment minus the usual questions for Christianity, The CD booklet threatens a live tour as well as a narrative Internet series. This type of nonsense is exactly what all of you needs. Put down the Hannah Montana and Jonas Brothers stop fantasizing that Madonna is 25, and listen to something creative for a change. One of the darkest tracks is “Pictures from a Little Girl.” A sample of the lyrics: “Large faces covered with scratch marks, kind of like the paper had once been swarming with ants, and she killed them all with her crayons.” - DB
