We get something wrong?

If there's any almost-forgotten songwriter who deserves to get back in the game, it's Grant Hart.

The former drummer and co-leader of iconic punk trio Hüsker Dü—he wrote favorites like “The Girl Who Lives On Heaven Hill” and “Diane”—pretty much vanished after a series of '90s albums, solo and with Nova Mob, that never got the attention they deserved, especially 1999's terrific Good News For Modern Man. Maybe Hart doesn't like that album either, though—he's been known to completely ignore it at shows, sticking instead to Hüsker-to-Nova Mob-era classics and promising new tunes from the forthcoming solo album he's making with members of Godspeed You! Black Emperor.
