Bob Mould Crosses into the District Line

Listen to Bob Mould. Or else.

Sounds like the sublime noise of guitar and electronica will follow Bob Mould onto his forthcoming studio album, District Line, to be released on February 5. The living legend, formerly the front man for punk rock innovators, Hüsker Dü, and the pop rock outfit, Sugar, told Billboard that the album could be described as a "logical extension" of his well received 2005 release, Body of Song. Expect 10 tracks on his new effort, with help from Fugazi drummer Brendan Canty, a frequent collaborator.

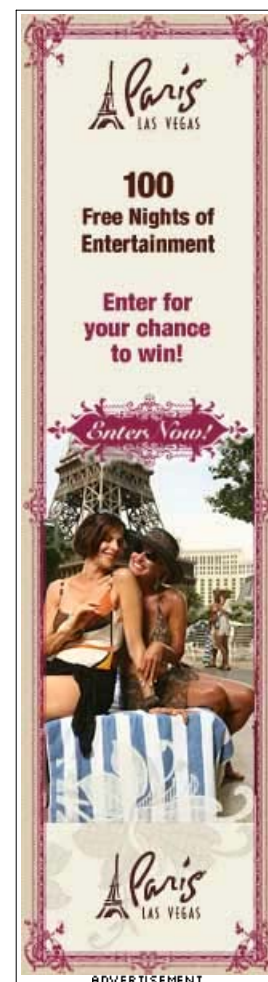

Speaking of 2005, that year included a career-spanning performance from Mould at the 9:30 Club in Washington, D.C., his adopted home. The epic show is captured on a DVD released this week, called Circle of Friends. As if to prove the warm sensibility of the title, the founder of the beloved Blowoff party right now is touring solo to play sets, screen the film, and answer questions.

How sweet of him.

Circle of Friends plays next Saturday as part of Reel Affirmations 17, Washington, D.C.'s international gay and lesbian film festival that opened yesterday.

Better cross that district line.
