Farewell Israel

I JUST FINISHED watching the documentary, Farewell Israel: Bush, Iran, and The Revolt of Islam. I liked most of it, and I think it will be a useful tool for us citizen warriors who want to help educate and motivate our fellow kafirs to join us in stopping Islam's relentless encroachment.

The first half is very good. It covers the history of Islam from the beginning, putting emphasis on how Muhammad and then his followers treated kafirs — particularly Jews. The presentation was very fair and straightforward. If anything, I thought they were a little generous toward Islam. For example, in describing a major attack on the Muslims at Medina, the narrator failed to mention why Mecca was attacking (Mecca was a major trading city, with caravans arriving all the time, and Muhammad and his Muslims kept attacking the caravan, killing their business and killing their people). But maybe this point wasn't necessary.

And maybe it is a good thing to be overly fair to the Muslims because there was plenty of negative stuff to report, and maybe the extreme fairness would help a viewer who knows nothing about Islam accept the information when they realize the documentary is, if anything, overly fair to Islam.

Other than that, and the goofy song at the end, the DVD was very good, very informative, and very fast-paced. It's definitely something I will loan to people.

One of the things the film does right from the start is contrast what non-Muslims mean when they say "religion" versus what a Muslim means by the term. And what a non-Muslim means when they say "freedom" or "peace" or "equality" versus what a Muslim means. I thought, "Now that is a great way to open someone's eyes to the situation." They could have added the distinction between what Muslims might define as an "innocent civilian" versus the way actual innocent civilians might define it.

The film traces the history of jihad from Muhammad to the present, and explains very well what the trouble in the Middle East has been about since the formation of Israel. It was frustrating to watch leaders of Israel and the United States and the UN completely misunderstand the Muslims' intentions. Again and again, ignorant leaders appeased and conceded to Muslim pressure, only to be stabbed in the back.

Pleasantville and Terrorism

One of the most unusual articles on CitizenWarrior.com is Pleasantville and Terrorism. It illustrates the Islamic terrorists' vision by showing the similarity between what happened in the movie, Pleasantville, and what happens in an Islamic state like Iran. Read the article here.
