

This week on the MSN DVD column

The new DVD column went live on MSN Entertainment on Tuesday morning, March 9.

Blank Generation

Not to be confused with Amos Poe's 1976 documentary of the same name, this 1980 film by Ulli Lommel also dives into the New York punk rock scene. Richard Hell stars as a burned-out singer having a tumultuous affair with an emotionally erratic French journalist (Carole Bouquet). The film wanders the streets of New York looking for a story and never finds one, but it offers a snapshot of the city in 1978, grimy New York underground atmosphere and live performances by Hell and the Voidoids. Features a new 45-minute interview with Hell, who makes no bones about what he thinks is wrong with the film and director Lommel.

- Sean Axemaker