Readers are treated to a hour and a half of Beatles’ history. It is like coming across a treasure chest packed with gems.

No Beatle fan should be without this one. Home movies, previously unpublished photographs, film and anecdotes by accurate sources, people who actually knew the Beatles personally and could verify their accounts grace this film.

The Beatles in their final lineup were first filmed in 1962. This DVD treats viewers to the Beatles’ October 1964 tour of Scotland; excerpts of a John Lennon interview for a French television program and numerous clips and tidbits sure to delight any fan.

This gets a hearty yeah, yeah, yeah!

The Beatles: Rare and Unseen is a DVD packed with long-hidden treasures concerning one of the most popular and beloved bands in the world: previously unseen home movies, personal photographs, recently rediscovered film, and true stories related firsthand from the witnesses who were there. From the earliest known footage of the Beatles on stage (Liverpool, Feb. 1962), to the one existing film of their Scotland tour (Caird Hall Dundee, Oct. 1964) to highlights of an interview with John Lennon (recorded in New York for French TV), The Beatles: Rare and Unseen is an absolute “must-have” for Beatles fans everywhere. Highly recommended. 90 minutes.

“The Beatles: Rare and Unseen” is a collection of home movies, personal photographs, recently rediscovered film, and true stories told by the people who were actually involved in the events. Content includes the earliest known footage of the Beatles on stage in Liverpool in 1962; film of the band at Caird Hall, Dundee, in October, 1964, during their tour of Scotland; behind-the-scenes footage of the filming of “Help” (February, 1965); the making of “Magical Mystery Tour” (September, 1967); and highlights of an interview conducted in New York City for French television. The DVD contains interviews with Phil Collins, musicians, and tour personnel, who provide anecdotes on traveling and working with the Fab Four during their heyday.
