I'm really a sucker for these reunions of popular groups from the 60s, 70s and 80s. Usually there is so much joy and good spirits, coming both from the musicians and the crowd. I can think of recent concerts I have seen from Caravan, The Strawbs... for which I have precious memories. Sure there has been a few exceptions, bands that want to stretch it out, perhaps only for the money, but clearly this is not the case with After The Fire, this DVD of a recent show Live At Greenbelt being such a pleasure to watch.

Like Genesis, After The Fire is a band that has two distinct periods. They started out as a Prog band, influenced by the poppier side of Yes and also by Barclay James Harvest. In the eighties they chose the New Wave sound and had a huge planetary hit with "Der Kommissar" (Don't turn around oh! oh!...) but sadly they never followed it with another... and quickly disappeared.

Now, more than 20 years later, we get to watch this reunion show, that goes through both periods of the band. Well filmed and recorded, the band performs quite well and the crowd is very enthusiastic. It's the kind of show that makes you say to yourself "I would have liked to have been there". Well Live At Greenbelt makes it almost possible. Recommended indeed!
