

Truth About Kerry

(<http://www.dvdsnapshot.com/wp-content/uploads/2012/04/TruthAboutKerry.jpg>) Official Synopsis:

Emma, a young American woman (Stana Katic, Quantum of Solace, TV's Castle) travels to a remote village in Ireland to investigate the mysterious circumstances surrounding her best friend Kerry's death. Distraught by constant dreams and haunting visions of Kerry, Emma refuses to believe that the death was an accident. It isn't long before Emma's quest leads her to believe that the village may be hiding more secrets than she thought.

Our Take:

Truth About Kerry was really disappointing. I like Stana Katic a lot, but even she couldn't save this. I love films in Ireland too and this was just slow and drawn out. I don't know how long ago this film was made, but Katic doesn't exactly look the same. The story was okay enough, but it seemed to take forever to get going and then the ending just seemed extremely rushed. Maybe I expected too much from her because of her character in Castle, but I figured she could have the case wrapped in 45 minutes. The scenery was really amazing and I loved the accents, but the direction and overall film was really weak.

Special Features:

- Director Diaries
- Ciaran Music Diary
- 5 Minutes With The Director
- Truth About Kerry Music Video
- Trailer

Conclusion:

Trust about Kerry is a film for someone who has to see everything Stana Katic has done. Other than that, I'd avoid this like a hangover after a night of drinking. The actress who played Kerry didn't seem overly worthwhile for the local Irish town to go crazy over on top of it. I think the ending could have been good if it was brought in sooner and blended into the story more than just being rushed and added on. It really seemed like they just said oh yeah here's the ending.

COULD HAVE BEEN BETTER!

Overall Picture:

Movie: C-
