Rating for Robert Plant's Blue Note:

"Morocco is a land of a thousand contradictions," states legendary former Led Zeppelin frontman and music icon, Robert Plant, in the traveloguesque Robert Plant's Blue Note. The same can be said about the complex singer himself. Not just a "golden god" or rock 'n' roller, Plant, over five decades, has established himself as a quintessential artist, combing the spectrum of creativity, constantly mining the vast fields of melodies and harvesting musical gold. Blue Note isn't as much a documentary as it is a chronological and geographical timeline through the musical influences of this seminal blues/rock artist.

From Elvis to Howlin' Wolf, the tapestry of Robert's musical quilt is explored in Blue Note. He is shown to be as much a musicologist as a musician; the Indiana Jones of the music arena, he's constantly in search of the next titillating note, blending and relating seemingly distant music styles. As evidenced in his Zeppelin days and solo years, he has a knack for making the foreign familiar and vice versa. In discussing his interest in world music, particularly North African and Indian, he reveals his true love for music and why he's been said to have an "Arabic spirit."
