The lowdown: This documentary looks at one of the most iconic collaborations in music.

In 1966, Bob Dylan undertook his first electric world tour. His backup band was a Canadian group called The Hawks.

Afterward, Dylan and the group spent time in New York's Catskill Mountains where both underwent transformations: Dylan as an artist and The Hawks into "The Band."

This DVD looks at the lengthy relationship between Dylan and The Band. It features their amateur recordings, interviews and music.

Technical aspects: 4x3 full-screen picture. English stereo audio.

Don't miss: No extras.
