WHAT DO YOU DO WITH 12 SIRLOIN STEAKS?

By now, many of us either saw the front-page photo of the homeless crook stealing steaks from a Trader Joe’s in Manhattan or the video of the heist. He just walked in, put 12 sirloin steaks into a shopping cart, and walked out. Employees chased him and told him he couldn’t take the cart, so he picked up the steaks and walked off with them.

When pressed by a nearby reporter, he claimed he was both hungry and homeless.

“NEVER MY LOVE”
Back in my younger days,

I remember really liking The Association. This band had a great sound. Recently, I heard “Never My Love,” a song they made famous back in my college days, but this one must have been a cover version because they weren’t singing it. I have heard several versions of this tune, but never the one playing on my car radio. I tried to find it online to no avail. It was a much faster version with a good dance beat. Anyone out there remember this cover version? Help me out.

GUMBY AND POKEY RIDING BACK INTO TOWN?

This just in. It appears that an old favorite show for us baby boomers may be returning to the screen. Back in the ‘50s on Saturday mornings, I loved watching Gumby and his horse pal Pokey on their weekly adventures. It wasn’t a cartoon or live action, but somewhere in between. If you don’t already know who Gumby is, I can’t help you.

Perhaps these Saturday morning characters from long ago will catch on with a new generation of kids, or perhaps it will just fall on its face. We will see.
