Comedian John DiCrosta has an old school flavor about him I like. Which is hardly to say he's a "clean comedian" or some such. No, he's quite offensive if you have thin skin. But there's a simple purity to his offensiveness that harkens back to less politically correct times. And, let me tell you, there is a plethora of insane characters inside the head of John DiCrosta. And once they get out of his head and into yours, you're going to have the same problem as DiCrosta: MULTIPLE CHARACTER DISORDER! This gut-busting piece of LOL stand-up is made even funnier by DiCrosta's obvious self-amusement. I don't know if there's a comedian's protocol at getting caught up in the giggles by your own material while performing it live. While it should be obnoxious, with John, at least, it's not. It only makes it that much funnier. It's like hanging out with someone you know who is funny as hell and keeps you cracking up ...
